DAUGHERTY PROBE TO BE PUSHED

Set of Charges to Be Drafted by the Committee.

SERIES OF ALLEGATIONS MADE

One Negative Vote Cast Against the Wheeler Resolution Authorizing an Investigation Into the Attorney General's Administration of the Department of Justice—Brookhart, Insurgent Senator, Heads Probers.

Washington, March 3.—Senator Brookhart (Rep., Iowa), chairman of the special committee elected by the senate to investigate Attorney General Daugherty's administration of the department of justice, announced that hearings "will go forward as rapidly as is commensurate with justice."

A stated set of charges will likely be drafted by the committee in order to give the attorney general an opportunity to know how to prepare his defense.

As adopted by the senate, the Wheeler resolution calling for an investigation contains a long list of charges against Mr. Daugherty. It reads:

"Resolved, that a committee of five senators, consisting of three members of the majority and two of the minority, be authorized and directed to investigate circumstances and facts, concerning the alleged failure of Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general of the United States, to prosecute properly violators of the Sherman anti-trust act and the Clayton act against monopolies and unlawful restraint of trade; the alleged neglect and failure of the said Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general of the United States, to arrest and prosecute Albert B. Fall, Harry F. Sinclair, E. L. Doheny, C. R. Forbes and their conspirators in defrauding the government, as well as the neglect and failure of the said attorney general to arrest and prosecute many others for violations of federal statutes and this alleged failure to prosecute properly, efficiently and promptly and defend all manner of civil and criminal actions wherein the government of the United States is interested as a party plaintiff or defendant.

"And said committee is further directed to inquire into, investigate and report to the senate the activities of the said Harry M. Daugherty, attorney general, and any of his assistants in the department of justice which would in any manner tend to impair their efficiency or influence as representatives of the government of the United States."

Passage of the resolution occasioned a number of surprises. Senators Willis and Fess, Republicans of Ohio, who warmly defended Daugherty, voted for it, after Willis had several amendments enacted which inserted the word "alleged" before each charge leveled at the attorney general.

Senator Elkins of West Virginia cast the lone negative vote. He also opposed the election of the investigating committee by acclamation, but he was drowned out by both Republican and Democratic members.

It is apparent that the committee finally elected was a compromise "slate" agreed upon by Republican, insurgent and Democratic leaders. This was demonstrated when its members were nominated. Brookhart was named by Senator LaFollette of Wisconsin, leader of the Insurgents; Fess was nominated by Senator Curtis of Kansas, Republican; and Ashurst and Wheeler were proposed by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader.

While discussion of the resolution in the senate was at its height President Coolidge was criticized. Democratic senators attacked the president for continuing Daugherty in office, and one, Senator McKellar of Tennessee, condemned the president for not explaining mention of "a telegraph wire into the white house" in messages sent E. B. McLean at Palm Beach. Coolidge was also criticized by Senator Fess of Ohio for urging a New York audience to write congress advocating passage of the Mellon tax plan.

Land Grant Case Up.

Washington, March 3.—The public lands committee of the house opened hearings on the Northern Pacific railway land grant case to determine what action should be taken in the investigation of alleged charges of breach of contract by the railroad. The investigation was started at the request of President Coolidge.

FIGURES REVEALED

Personal Property Returns in Ohio Last Year Show Increase.

Columbus, March 3.—The state tax commission disclosed that personal property returns in Ohio last year numbered 1,008,613, as compared to 968,522 for 1922. Valuation of banks for taxation in 1923 was $235,542,270, an increase of $13,519,238 over the preceding year.

The figures showed that of domestic animals, cattle had the highest valuation during 1923. Total number of cattle was 1,622,428, with a valuation of $56,211,192, or an average of $34.65. Number and valuation of other farm animals for 1923 were: Horses, 632,112, valued at $45,940,426; sheep, 1,627,950, valued at $10,611,522; hogs, 2,458,402; valued at $21,122,591; poultry, 13,909,886, valued at $10,968,993, and mules and asses, numbering 32,970, valued at $2,430,581.

OFFICIALS PROBING JERSEY EXPLOSION

Would Place Blame for Blast That Lost Many Lives.

Newark, N. J., March 3.—The authorities are conducting an investigation of the explosion at the Nixon nitration plant at Nixon, N. J., in which 40 persons lost their lives, 100 were injured and a score of buildings in the vicinity razed.

The most tangible fact authorities were able to establish was that the first explosion—there were two in sharp succession—occurred in the plant of the Ammonite company, a short distance from the Nixon nitration plant. More than a million gallons of ammonia nitrate in tanks and 1,350,000 gallons of the same fluid in 15 tanks cars in a ramshackle warehouse blew up.

The blast rocked the country for miles around and completely leveled buildings within a radius of a mile and a half. It was distinctly felt as far away as New York city, a distance of 23 miles. A great sheet of yellowish flame emerged from the ruins of the building. Excited men and women, some of the women screaming and weeping, rushed into the open as burning embers fell on nearby buildings and within a few minutes other structures were in flames.

The building where the explosion originated was known as the TNT building. In this building the authorities were informed ammonia nitrate was being extracted from TNT. Army surgeons from Camp Raritan took charge of the situation. They directed the caring for the injured and the removal of the dead.

Church Bars Kamelias.

New Philadelphia, O., March 3.—The First Methodist Episcopal church of this city refused to allow funeral services of Mrs. Mary J. Nigh to be held in the church. Objection was made to members of the Kamelia auxiliary of the Ku Klux Klan wearing their robes. The services were held in the Baptist church and members of the order had charge of the services at the cemetery.

OPENS HEARINGS ON THE BONUS

Ways and Means Committee to Frame Bill This Week.

SEVERAL MEASURES BEFORE IT

McKenzie Bill, Similar to the One Voted by President Harding, to Receive Consideration—New Revenue Bill, Passed by the House, Now Before the Senate—Farm Relief Measure Reported by McNary.

Washington, March 3.—Hearings on soldier bonus legislation were opened today by the house ways and means committee, and a bill is expected to be reported to the house within a few days.

Three days of hearings will be held by the members. A number of bonus measures are before the committee, including the McKenzie measure, similar to the one vetoed by President Harding. Representatives Fish and Andrew, Republicans, have submitted bills recently, both making paid-up insurance policies of 20 and 25 years, respectively, the principal feature. Payments of cash sums would be allowed where the veteran would not be entitled to more than $50. The Andrew bill would allow compensation only to enlisted men, while the Fish proposal would include officers up to the rank of captain in the army and lieutenant in the navy, the same as provided by the McKenzie bill.

The senate is expected to give consideration soon to the revenue bill passed Friday by the house. As sent to the senate the measure includes the Longworth compromise on income tax rates. This calls for a 37½ per cent maximum surtax rate and would change the normal taxes also.

Senator McNary (Rep., Ore.) reported to the senate the McNary-Haughen bill, proposing the creation of a corporation to export surplus farm crops. "Testimony of witnesses before the senate agriculture committee," he said, "leaves no doubt as to the present severe depression. 'Whatever differences of opinion were voiced related only to the degree and not to the character of the danger to agriculture.'"

The committee reduced the life of the corporation to five years instead of 10, as proposed. Wheat, flour, raw cotton, wool, cattle, sheep, swine and food products of live stock are listed as commodities which come under operation of the proposed law. An export commission would be set up with the secretary of agriculture as chairman and secretary of commerce as vice chairman, and three other members to be appointed by the president. Whenever the ratio price of a commodity falls below the prevailing domestic price the commission is required to report the fact to the president, who is empowered to declare a special emergency exists in that commodity.

WANT EMBARGO LIFTED

Dayton Aviators Would Operate Between Two Mexican Points.

Washington, March 3.—Two Dayton aviators, Bernard Whelan and Howard Rinehart, have enlisted the aid of the state department to secure the privilege of taking two passenger airplanes to Mexico to operate between Tia Juana and Mexicali. The embargo against shipment of war material to Mexico stands in the way. The aviators have a concession which would make the proposed airplane service probable as well as a blessing to the people of that part of Mexico, where transportation facilities are very meager. Mr. Whelan is here to try to get the embargo raised as affecting the two airplanes intended for this service.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Italian Prisoner Pardoned.

Columbus, March 3.—Governor Donahy pardoned John Agosta, sentenced in Belmont county to life imprisonment. Agosta, who has been ill, will return to his mother in Italy. He spent much of his time in the prison hospital. Agosta drove the car carrying union miners who fired on strikebreakers in June, 1922, in the Belmont county coal riots. John I. Major, mine foreman, was killed. Agosta claimed he was compelled at the point of a revolver to drive the men to the mine.

Registrars Removed.

Columbus, March 3.—Two local registrars of vital statistics in Ross county have been removed by I. C. Plummer, chief of the division of vital statistics, under instructions from Dr. John E. Monger, director of health, for their failure to make reports of births and deaths under the law. The department is getting after physicians who fail to file birth certificates with the local registrars, and recently prosecuted six in Jefferson county for this dereliction.

Deadlock Develops.

Cincinnati, March 3.—Representatives of the United Mine Workers and coal operators on the north side of the Kanawha river in the Kanawha coal fields of West Virginia failed to come to an agreement on wages after sessions here that extended over two days. It is stated that no action was taken for a further meeting and that this is taken to mean that there is little prospect of an amicable agreement.

Embezzlement Alleged.

Cincinnati, March 3.—Warrants charging embezzlement of $866 and naming George Barr, recording secretary; Thomas Mugavin and John Sincos, business agents of Carpenters' Union No. 1, were sworn out here. The warrants were sworn to by James McElroy, former president of the union. The union was organized following strike trouble here a year ago.

Shoots In Defense of Sister.

Kenton, O., March 3.—According to a confession made to Sheriff Bulfinch, Leck Risner, 16, killed his brother-in-law, Charles Harvey, 35, in defense of his sister, Harvey's wife. The killing occurred on the farm of T. E. Thomas, near McGuffey, this county, where the principals, who are residents of Kentucky, are temporarily employed in the onion marshes.

Veteran Teacher Dead.

Cleveland, March 3.—Mrs. Sarah Pack Rice, 88, for more than 50 years a teacher in Akron and Cleveland, is dead at her home in Cleveland Heights. She taught in Akron in 1873 and 1874.

Workers Killed.

Portsmouth, O., March 3.—Charles M. Martin, 54, and Reuben McKinley, 39, colored, were killed here when a bank of a sewer.

Vanderlip's Statement.

New York, March 3.—Frank A. Vanderlip, financier, declared in a speech here that President Coolidge had asked for the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty, but has not received it up to the present time.

Lewis Not in Race.

Chicago, March 3.—Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis announced in a telegram received here from Mexico City that he is not a candidate for the United States senate and requests that such petitions be withheld.

FUTURE IS VIEWED WITH CONFIDENCE

Business Conditions in United States Found Satisfactory.

RESERVE BOARD'S REVIEW

Large Increases in Output of Steel Industries Shown, Together With Marked Growth in Volume of Commercial Loans—Distribution of Commodities and Output of Manufactures Show Increase in January.

Washington, March 3.—The federal reserve board, in its monthly survey of business conditions, states that the future is viewed with confidence in the world of trade and finance.

According to the board, the steel industries showed particularly large increases in output which at the end of January was as large as at any time in 1923. Unfilled orders in December, after nine months of downward tendencies, turned upward. The demand for steel to meet railroad requirements continued large, the board's statement said. The volume of commercial loans, which decreased continuously after October, began early in January to increase, and the trend was marked in the first half of February, when these loans were about $372,000,000, or approximately 5 per cent above the level of 1923. The growth in loans, however, was largely offset by a decrease in investment holdings.

The board states that retail trade was shown by department stores and mail order houses to have been larger also than at the beginning of 1923. Stocks of certain commodities were found to have been larger in January than in December or in January a year ago. The increases were particularly in coal, production of which was interrupted by the strike prior to January, 1923, and in petroleum and gasoline. The general list of other stocks on hand was about the same as a year ago, the board says. The distribution of commodities at wholesale and the shipments of merchandise increased in January as did the output of manufactures. This increase was sufficient to place the general level for the two months of 1924 above the average for 1923 and taken with the changes in production from late 1923 and the movements of prices reflected the extent and character of the recent business readjustments.

URGES SPECIAL SESSION

Crabbe Would Grant Relief to School Districts of the State.

Columbus, March 3.—Attorney General Crabbe has requested Governor Donahy to call a special session of the legislature to grant relief to schools now being closed at many points in the state. There is a dire need of funds in many school districts. The trouble is said to be distributed fairly evenly among municipalities and rural districts, and results from the effort made by the last legislature to compel school districts to go upon a "pay-as-you-go" basis. In his message to the governor, Crabbe points out that there is a surplus of $22,000,000 in the state treasury, and that "unless you have some other plan to open these schools immediately, will you not, in this great emergency, convene the legislature." He offers assistance of his department in drafting the needed legislation.

The governor consistently has refused to recall the legislature, saying that he intends abiding by Crabbe's ruling that it never has adjourned, and can come back whenever it wishes.

An international drug smuggling ring is believed by police to have been disclosed with the seizure at Alberg, Vt., of morphine and cocaine valued at more than $5,000. Jacob R. CRABBE MAKES ESTIMATE

More Than One Hundred "Card" Deputies Operating in Ohio.

Columbus, March 3.—Attorney General Crabbe stated that "card" prohibition agents in Ohio now number 110. The state prohibition department has refused to make public a list of card deputies, but members of the department said the number would not exceed 75. Crabbe said a check of state records shows 110 now are operating in different parts of the state.

In some courts 90 per cent of the raids conducted by "card" deputies are unproductive, it was said. An anonymous letter, a telephone call, or mere suspicion that a person may have booze in his home are sufficient warrant for the "card" deputies to raid a home. Homes of 20 people are raided in order to get two offenders, it was alleged.

Crabbe declared these men may make searches in business places without warrants and that there is nothing to prevent their raiding every office, store or business house in the state without a warrant or without even reasonable grounds for believing liquor is kept in the places raided.

MARINES GUARD CONSULATE

American Negro Killed in the Uprising in Honduras.

Washington, March 3.—The revolutionary outbreak in Honduras has resulted in the killing of an American negro at Celiba. A force of American marines is guarding the American consulate there and an United States destroyer has been ordered to the scene. The principal revolutionary movements are those of Generals Arias, who is understood to be dominating the de facto government forces and to hold the capital, Tegucigalpa, and most of the north coastal region of Honduras; and the party headed by General Carias, who obtained the greatest number of votes in the presidential elections, but failed of the necessary majority.

Guests Driven Out.

Columbus, March 3.—Fire at an early hour drove 200 guests from the Hotel Dennison. The blaze was confined to several rooms on the fifth floor. Loss $12,000.

DOINGS IN OHIO

Italian Prisoner Pardoned.

Columbus, March 3.—Governor Donahy pardoned John Agosta, sentenced in Belmont county to life imprisonment. Agosta, who has been ill, will return to his mother in Italy. He spent much of his time in the prison hospital. Agosta drove the car carrying union miners who fired on strikebreakers in June, 1922, in the Belmont county coal riots. John I. Major, mine foreman, was killed. Agosta claimed he was compelled at the point of a revolver to drive the men to the mine.

Registrars Removed.

Columbus, March 3.—Two local registrars of vital statistics in Ross county have been removed by I. C. Plummer, chief of the division of vital statistics, under instructions from Dr. John E. Monger, director of health, for their failure to make reports of births and deaths under the law. The department is getting after physicians who fail to file birth certificates with the local registrars, and recently prosecuted six in Jefferson county for this dereliction.

Deadlock Develops.

Cincinnati, March 3.—Representatives of the United Mine Workers and coal operators on the north side of the Kanawha river in the Kanawha coal fields of West Virginia failed to come to an agreement on wages after sessions here that extended over two days. It is stated that no action was taken for a further meeting and that this is taken to mean that there is little prospect of an amicable agreement.

Embezzlement Alleged.

Cincinnati, March 3.—Warrants charging embezzlement of $866 and naming George Barr, recording secretary; Thomas Mugavin and John Sincow, business agents of Carpenters' Union No. 1, were sworn out here. The warrants were sworn to by James McElroy, former president of the union. The union was organized following strike trouble here a year ago.

Shoots In Defense of Sister.

Kenton, O., March 3.—According to a confession made to Sheriff Bullin, Leck Risner, 16, killed his brother-in-law, Charles Harvey, 25, in defense of his sister, Harvey's wife. The killing occurred on the farm of T. E. Thomas, near McGuffey, this county, where the principals, who are residents of Kentucky, are temporarily employed in the onion marshes.

Veteran Teacher Dead.

Cleveland, March 3.—Mrs. Sarah Pack Rice, 88, for more than 50 years a teacher in Akron and Cleveland, is dead at her home in Cleveland Heights. She taught in Akron in 1873 and 1874.

Workers Killed.

Portsmouth, O., March 3.—Charles M. Martin, 54, and Reuben McKinley, 36, colored, were killed here when a bank of a sewer.

Vanderlip's Statement.

New York, March 3.—Frank A. Vanderlip, financier, declared in a speech here that President Coolidge had asked for the resignation of Attorney General Daugherty, but has not received it up to the present time.

Lewis Not in Race.

Chicago, March 3.—Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis announced in a telegram received here from Mexico City that he is not a candidate for the United States senate and requests that such petitions be withheld.

FUTURE IS VIEWED WITH CONFIDENCE

Business Conditions in United States Found Satisfactory.

RESERVE BOARD'S REVIEW

Washington, March 3.—The federal reserve board, in its monthly survey of business conditions, states that the future is viewed with confidence in the world of trade and finance.

According to the board, the steel industries showed particularly large increases in output which at the end of January was as large as at any time in 1923. Unfilled orders in December, after nine months of downward tendencies, turned upward. The demand for steel to meet railroad requirements continued large, the board's statement said. The volume of commercial loans, which decreased continuously after October, began early in January to increase, and the trend was marked in the first half of February, when these loans were about $372,000,000, or approximately 5 per cent above the level of 1923. The growth in loans, however, was largely offset by a decrease in investment holdings.

The board states that retail trade was shown by department stores and mail order houses to have been larger also than at the beginning of 1923. Stocks of certain commodities were found to have been larger in January than in December or in January a year ago. The increases were particularly in coal, production of which was interrupted by the strike prior to January, 1923, and in petroleum and gasoline. The general list of other stocks on hand was about the same as a year ago, the board says. The distribution of commodities at wholesale and the shipments of merchandise increased in January as did the output of manufactures. This increase was sufficient to place the general level for the two months of 1924 above the average for 1923 and taken with the changes in production from late 1923 and the movements of prices reflected the extent and character of the recent business readjustments.

URGES SPECIAL SESSION

Crabbe Would Grant Relief to School Districts of the State.

Columbus, March 3.—Attorney General Crabbe has requested Governor Donahy to call a special session of the legislature to grant relief to schools now being closed at many points in the state. There is a dire need of funds in many school districts. The trouble is said to be distributed fairly evenly among municipalities and rural districts, and results from the effort made by the last legislature to compel school districts to go upon a "pay-as-you-go" basis. In his message to the governor, Crabbe points out that there is a surplus of $22,000,000 in the state treasury, and that "unless you have some other plan to open these schools immediately, will you not, in this great emergency, convene the legislature." He offers assistance of his department in drafting the needed legislation.

The governor consistently has refused to recall the legislature, saying that he intends abiding by Crabbe's ruling that it never has adjourned, and can come back whenever it wishes.

HERE AND THERE

An international drug smuggling ring is believed by police to have been disclosed with the seizure at Alberg, Vt., of morphine and cocaine valued at more than $5,000. Jacob R. Miller and Sydney Grant, who were arrested in connection with the seizure, came to Alberg from some point in the province of Quebec.

Grave diggers of Naples are on strike for increased pay and extra allowances because of the high cost of living.

Prince Viggo of Denmark, cousin of King Christian, sailed for Europe on the Olympic, saying he would return next June to marry Miss Eleanor Green of New York.

Rates on grain moving into the southeastern quarter of the United States from the Mississippi valley to the Atlantic coast are reasonable as they stand, it was decided by the interstate commerce commission.

CRABBE MAKES ESTIMATE

More Than One Hundred "Card" Deputies Operating in Ohio.

Columbus, March 3.—Attorney General Crabbe stated that "card" prohibition agents in Ohio now number 110. The state prohibition department has refused to make public a list of card deputies, but members of the department said the number would not exceed 75. Crabbe said a check of state records shows 110 now are operating in different parts of the state.

In some courts 90 per cent of the raids conducted by "card" deputies are unproductive, it was said. An anonymous letter, a telephone call, or mere suspicion that a person may have booze in his home are sufficient warrant for the "card" deputies to raid a home. Homes of 20 people are raided in order to get two offenders, it was alleged.

Crabbe declared these men may make searches in business places without warrants and that there is nothing to prevent their raiding every office, store or business house in the state without a warrant or without even reasonable grounds for believing liquor is kept in the places raided.

MARINES GUARD CONSULATE

Washington, March 3.—The revolutionary outbreak in Honduras has resulted in the killing of an American negro at Celba. A force of American marines is guarding the American consulate there and an United States destroyer has been ordered to the scene. The principal revolutionary movements are those of Generals Arias, who is understood to be dominating the de facto government forces and to hold the capital, Tegucigalpa, and most of the north coastal region of Honduras; and the party headed by General Carias, who obtained the greatest number of votes in the presidential elections, but failed of the necessary majority.

Guests Driven Out.

Columbus, March 3.—Fire at an early hour drove 200 guests from the Hotel Dennison. The blaze was confined to several rooms on the fifth floor. Loss $12,000.

MARKET REVIEW

Columbus, March 3.—Market conditions during the past week are reviewed by the Ohio division of markets as follows:

FRUITS AND VEGETABLES—Eastern round white potatoes steady at $1 75; 1 sack per 100 pounds, $1 45 at shipping points; northern sacked round whites weaker at $1 15; 30 in Chicago, 95c; at 15 shipping points. EXPLAINS HOW TO READ WEATHER MAPS

Marks and Lines Made Intelligible by Experts.

Washington.—Almost everyone is familiar with the large weather maps located in public places, such as railway stations, post offices, or government buildings. The weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture issues a printed explanation of the weather map, telling in detail what the various marks and lines mean, and how the map is read.

The daily weather reports consist of observations of the barometer and thermometer, the velocity and direction of the wind, state of the weather, and amount of rain or snow. On the weather maps solid lines, called isobars, are drawn through points that have the same atmospheric pressure. Dotted lines called isotherms are drawn through points that have the same temperature. The direction of the wind at each station is indicated by an arrow which flies with the wind. Shaded areas are sometimes used to show areas of rainfall or snowfall. Tabular data gives other details.

The centers of areas of low barometric pressure are indicated on the map by the word "low" and the centers of areas of high barometric pressure by the word "high."

In the northern hemisphere winds blow spirally inward, counterclockwise, toward and around the center of a low, while from the center of a high they blow spirally outward as the hands of a clock move. These facts influence the direction from which prevailing winds at any point are blowing. There are rather well-defined storm tracks which may be traced on a weather map, and very definite indications of the character of approaching weather changes, which may be found on the weather charts. Topography and the location of land and water areas with regard to the place where the observer happens to be are, of course, important factors in weather changes.

State Penitentiary Gives Mule Parole

Walla Walla, Wash.—Jessie, a Missouri mule, believed to be more than thirty-three years old, and who is as prominently identified with the state penitentiary as the wall itself, has been paroled.

Officials of the institution decided that Jessie, after many years of faithful work, had served her allotted time and from now on she will have nothing to do except loaf around the stables, eat oats or hay and romp in the field.

More or less of a human interest story is involved, according to the officials, as the parole will mean the parting of Jessie and "Never Sleep," her negro master, who is confined in the prison. The two have worked together over a long period hauling coal about the grounds.

The mule was formerly used at Fort Walla Walla, making an appearance there in 1893 as the leader of a shackle team which was used to haul freight between the fort and Walla Walla. When the fort was abandoned in 1910 the state purchased her for use at the penitentiary, and she has remained there since.

Dog Kills $1,000 Fox Caught Stealing Hens

Vancouver, Wash.—A commotion in his chicken yard at night caused R. H. Miller of Fruit Valley to investigate, and he arrived in time to see a blue fox leaving the yard with a chicken in its mouth. His dog, a mixed Alredale and Alaska wolfhound, dashed after the fox and killed it before Mr. Miller could interfere.

Dr. R. J. Mercer claimed the pet, as the fox was one of three that escaped from the Mercer fox farm some time ago. The mate to the one killed was captured the following night at Hazeldehl by some boys and the third animal is believed to be in the neighborhood of the farm, as several chickens and ducks have disappeared recently. The fox killed was valued at $1,000.

London Stock Exchange Now Has Coat of Arms

London.—After having been in existence for 180 years, the London Stock Exchange has realized that it is just as important as most of the other great city corporations which have their coats of arms, so the trustees and managers have decided that the stock exchange shall have a coat of arms all to itself.

The College of Heralds has submitted a design to the authorities and should this be approved the great bargaining house in Threadneedle street will have its own heraldic insignia.

Metallic Brocade

for Evening Wear

Winsome Fabric Reveals Sumptuousness When Worn at Night.

The metallic brocades are extremely smart this season, and they reveal their beauty and sumptuousness when worn at night. On the other hand, observes a fashion writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, if one buys a frock with the idea of making use of it throughout the spring, one of filmy tulle or chiffon will give excellent service. Satin is making its appearance as an evening fabric, white being especially good.

And speaking of colors, don't be afraid to buy an evening frock in some vivid shade such as rose, flame, jade green, gold, Japanese tangerine, amber, turquoise blue or silver. These are the colors which are in vogue both in brocades as well as in plain materials.

As regards necklines, the bateau seems to have almost entirely disappeared. Even when the frock presents this line across the front, the back may be cut in a deep V. The round neck is used for dinner gowns, and the square neck is also returning to favor. For the more extreme décolletage a single shoulder strap is often used, the other shoulder being bare or having only a rhinestone ornament or floral band, the front of the frock forming a diagonal effect.

It seems strange that the vogue for the Spanish or Chinese shawl which is so pronounced in New York as well as in the fashion centers of the old world, should not make itself felt everywhere. It plays such a prominent part abroad in matters sartorial that returning buyers prophesy a revival of the Spanish influence both in modes and designs for the coming spring. In the East entire frocks are fashioned of these lovely embroidered silken shawls, the one-strap effect being used for the bodice with a diagonal draping line across the figure.

Gone is the huge squash-like coiffure with which a few seasons ago we used to hide our ears. The fluffy out-standing bob is also passe, its place being taken by a close boyish cut which may be waved or worn plain. Even the matron who still clings to her uncut locks combs them close about her head in as boyish a manner as possible. Simple little bandeaux may be worn, or the hair is left unadorned. Extremely long earrings are in vogue, while bracelets and beads may be utilized in carrying out the color scheme of one's costume.

Match your feather fan with a vanity bag is one of the very newest fads. These clever bags come in the guise of harem-clad ladies their silken garments being trimmed with black silk net and black ostrich. Their net-edged sleeves serve as drawstrings while a loop of silk serves to attach them to one's fan. The colors are jade, orchid, coral, blue and flame.

For street wear the dress-and-wrap costume is a distinct favorite with the designers, most frequently worked out with a cape, long or short, and often with straight rectangular scarfs that have slits for the hands.

Jade With Silver Lace,

Features of This Dress

For the dance, this charming jade evening dress, trimmed charmingly with silver lace, should be the pride of any young woman.

Coral Lantern Shade.

Tinted Literature.
"Your narrative is too highly colored," remarked the editor, returning the bulky manuscript. "In what way?" inquired the disappointed author. "Why," replied the editor, "in the very first chapter you make the old man turn purple with rage, the villain green with envy, the hero turn white with anger, the heroine turn red with confusion and the coachman turn blue with the cold."—Tit-Bits.

Metallic Brocade for Evening Wear

Winsome Fabric Reveals Sumptuousness When Worn at Night.

The metallic brocades are extremely smart this season, and they reveal their beauty and sumptuousness when worn at night. On the other hand, observes a fashion writer in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, if one buys a frock with the idea of making use of it throughout the spring, one of filmy tulle or chiffon will give excellent service. Satin is making its appearance as an evening fabric, white being especially good.

And speaking of colors, don't be afraid to buy an evening frock in some vivid shade such as rose, flame, jade green, gold, Japanese tangerine, amber, turquoise blue or silver. These are the colors which are in vogue both in brocades as well as in plain materials.

As regards necklines, the bateau seems to have almost entirely disappeared. Even when the frock presents this line across the front, the back may be cut in a deep V. The round neck is used for dinner gowns, and the square neck is also returning to favor. For the more extreme décolletage a single shoulder strap is often used, the other shoulder being bare or having only a rhinestone ornament or floral band, the front of the frock forming a diagonal effect.

It seems strange that the vogue for the Spanish or Chinese shawl which is so pronounced in New York as well as in the fashion centers of the old world, should not make itself felt everywhere. It plays such a prominent part abroad in matters sartorial that returning buyers prophesy a revival of the Spanish influence both in modes and designs for the coming spring. In the East entire frocks are fashioned of these lovely embroidered silken shawls, the one-strap effect being used for the bodice with a diagonal draping line across the figure.

Gone is the huge squash-like coiffure with which a few seasons ago we used to hide our ears. The fluffy outstanding bob is also passe, its place being taken by a close boyish cut which may be waved or worn plain. Even the matron who still clings to her uncut locks combs them close about her head in as boyish a manner as possible. Simple little bandeaux may be worn, or the hair is left unadorned. Extremely long earrings are in vogue, while bracelets and beads may be utilized in carrying out the color scheme of one's costume.

Match your feather fan with a vanity bag is one of the very newest fads. These clever bags come in the guise of harem-clad ladies their silken garments being trimmed with black silk net and black ostrich. Their net-edged sleeves serve as drawstrings while a loop of silk serves to attach them to one's fan. The colors are jade, orchid, coral, blue and flame.

For street wear the dress-and-wrap costume is a distinct favorite with the designers, most frequently worked out with a cape, long or short, and often with straight rectangular scarfs that have slits for the hands.

Jade With Silver Lace, Features of This Dress

For the dance, this charming jade evening dress, trimmed charmingly with silver lace, should be the pride of any young woman.

Coral Lantern Shade.

AMERICAN LEGION

East Liverpool Post Comes to Relief of Starving German Children.

The East Liverpool Post of the American Legion has agreed to support one German child for each member, during the next six months.

The information was wired to General Chauncey B. Baker, chairman of the Ohio Division of the American Committee for Relief of German Children by Vice Commander William Foulks following a post meeting at which every man present agreed to the plan.

The offer is characteristic of the general spirit of cooperation in the effort to relieve suffering in Germany, being extended by the ex-soldiers, but is the first case of an offer of this kind. In addition the East Liverpool Legionaries who have, about 350 members, constituting one of the strongest and most active posts in the state, will assist in the general campaign in this city.

Due to the efficient system of buying supplies and distributing them the cost of feeding a child in Germany has been reduced to 50c a month so that each member of this post will have the satisfaction of having saved a child's life and the whole expense will be but $3 per man.

A great effort is being made by the American committee to rush supplies into Germany following reports by radio from workers with the American Society of Friends, that a sudden return of winter has greatly increased suffering. In spite of the fact that the entire resources of the society have been thrown into the work only a portion of the relief work has been attempted. Many thousands are being cared for by German relief agencies which are doing many times more work than the foreign agencies but in many sections it has been impossible to establish feeding stations with the limited funds available and it is in these sections that the death and disease rates are unusually high.

MISSED AN OPPORTUNITY.

It looks to an outside observer as if the Democratic leaders in the national house of representatives, in their eagerness to gain a political advantage on the tax reduction measure had overreached themselves. Finding that the Mellon plan was unacceptable to the insurgent Republicans the Democrats, under Representative Garner, of Texas, prepared a measure radically different from the Mellon plan and which, they thought, would appeal to the insurgents.

It was the desire of the leaders to push thru this measure in order that the party might go before the people in the coming presidential election with the declaration that tax reduction was due to Democratic action. This claim has now been taken from them and tax reduction will be presented as part of the Republican thunder. This came about because the regular Republicans offered a compromise bill, the insurgents deserted the Democrats, abandoned the Garner measure and voted for the Longworth compromise.

It would seem as if the Democrats ought to know by this time that they cannot depend on Republican promise even tho they be insurgents. They have been "double crossed" once more. It would have been better politics for the Democratic congressmen to have regarded tax reduction as an absolutely non-partisan measure, as it is, and to have effected a compromise with the regular Republicans, which could easily have been done.

In that event the insurgents would have been negligible and a measure would have been passed, which could not have been passed without Democratic aid. Then the Democratic party could have gone out and said with truth that tax reduction came about thru their aid, that the regular Republicans were helpless until Democrats came to the aid of the people and effected the passage of a tax reduction measure. Without them it could not have been done.

As it is they have missed an opportunity. The insurgents played them false, as might have been expected, and now all the credit for tax reduction will be claimed by the Republicans.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

WILL DELIVER MAIL
VIA THE NORTH POLENorway to Accept Cards on
Top of World

New York.—Arrangements for the first aerial mail service "via the North pole" to be inaugurated as a part of the air polar expedition, headed by Capt. Roald Amundsen next summer, were announced in a cablegram from the discoverer of the South pole received in New York recently.

The Norwegian government, the cable said, has agreed to accept at the post office at Spitzbergen, where the expedition hops off, specially stamped post cards issued in commemoration of the event, which are to be canceled at the North pole and then delivered by regular mail to all parts of the world.

Proceeds from the sale of these souvenir cards, which it is believed will command high values from stamp collectors, will go to defray expenses of the Amundsen expedition. Their sale in the United States has been undertaken by the Wanamaker stores in New York and Philadelphia as a special service for Captain Amundsen, who is now in Norway contemplating arrangements for the flight.

The polar post cards are unique in that they are the only cards ever issued which will carry the postage stamps of two governments. They also bear prominently across their face the legend: "Delivery subject to accidents beyond our control." This attempt to reach the North pole is to be made by a squadron of four airplanes, or flying boats, which are being specially constructed at the Dornier works, at Friedrichshafen, Germany.

They are built of a special metal, and the hulls are so constructed that the planes will be able to take off equally well from water, ice or snow.

Each plane is to be equipped with a wireless receiving and sending set with an estimated range of 400 to 500 miles. With relays from the expedition's mother ship and various other bases established on the polar ice sheet, Captain Amundsen expects wireless messages of the arrival at the pole to reach New York within a few hours.

Lieut. Ralph Davidson, United States navy, who has been assigned by Secretary Denby as America's representative and who will pilot one of the planes, is now on his way to Switzerland to make tests of landing and taking off on ice and snow.

Miss Annie Peck Seeks
New Peaks to Scale

New York.—Although well past sixty, Miss Annie S. Peck, above, the world's foremost woman mountain climber, is looking for new heights to scale. She recently returned from a four months' expedition through South America, gathering material for her lectures and books. Miss Peck became famous in 1895 when she reached the top of the Swiss Matterhorn, after many people had been killed trying to accomplish the same feat. In 1908 she was the first and only person ever to reach the top of Mount Huescaran, in Peru, 21,812 feet high, the greatest altitude in North and South America. Now she would scale a few more peaks should someone agree to finance the expedition.

Insects Imported to Fight Orchard Plague

Montreal.—New Zealand is about to make an experiment in interfering with the balance of nature in the interests of her fruit-growing industry. The Dominion authorities in England recently dispatched to the Nelson district, which is suffering from a plague of earwigs, a consignment of several hundred of these insects in the hope of wiping out the domestic pest by these importations.

The insects were shipped in specially constructed wooden cages and were fed throughout their 10,000-mile voyage on lettuce and fruit.

Knights of Broken Heart

San Pedro, Cal.—The curse of a broken heart. That's the motto of the Knights of the Broken Heart, an organization of sailors at the naval base here. Five tars, disappointed in love, formed the club. To be eligible the applicant must prove that he or she has had a quarrel with husband, wife or sweetheart. Engagement automatically severs the member's good standing.

STARS AND STRIPES

And Quaker Mission Only Hope of Little, Helpless German Children.

"The only flag the starving children of Germany have is the Stars and Stripes and the American Quaker mission is their only hope," George E. Leach, mayor of Minneapolis and a colonel in the 151st Field Artillery during the war who recently returned home from a visit to Germany said in a statement to General Chauncey B. Baker, chairman of the Ohio division of the American Committee for Relief of German Children.

"The misery I saw among the middle classes of Berlin beggars description but nothing has ever touched my heart so much as the condition of the children, blameless as they are for their condition, never having known anything but hunger and want," Mayor Leach said.

"Regardless of the political situation, regardless of the government's own ability or lack of ability to help, regardless of any cause excusable or not, they are entitled to the sympathy of the world and especially of America where above all, God has been so generous to his children.

"I ask the people of America to consider:

"If your child went to school this morning without having had food for 24 hours.

"If your child could go to school because he was without shoes.

If your child had to eat today only a carrot or a bit of turnip or some cold potatoes.

"If you saw your boy growing up to only half his normal stature, probably with rickets, curvature of the spine or consumption because you could not give him the most simple ration of milks and fats.

"This is the condition of 2,000,000 children who are without hope, knowing nothing but starvation since they were born and facing the most extreme starvation this spring unless help comes."

TIMELY POULTRY NOTES.

Now is the time to arrange for April hatched chicks which will make the best winter layers.

If your incubator is being operated in a room with uniform temperature and well ventilated, it will give better hatches.

Be sure your breeding stock has plenty of meat scraps or ground bone and vegetables, sprouted oats or green material. These elements help produce better fertility and stronger chicks.

The best perches are not more than two feet from the floor, all on the same level to prevent crowding, and movable so that they may be easily kept clean.

Observe which hens are the best layers and breed from them.

No one kind of grain will give as good results as a variety.

If you haven't a grinder, get some fresh bone and chop it fine for the hens. It beats nothing all to pieces but better buy a grinder if possible. You can get a good one for $10.

The smaller and more crowded the house, the cleaner it must be kept.—Farm Life.

COOPER RAPS VIOLATORS

Would Place Prohibition Enforcement Under a Single Head.

Washington, March 3.—Representative Cooper of Ohio would take the whole enforcement of prohibition away from the "politicians" and place it in the hands of some department of government under a single head which would be held responsible. He holds the work of prohibition officials difficult enough without being complicated because of "political obligations and entanglements."

Mr. Cooper in a speech in the house attacked the society bootleggers and politicians, who he charged are making a farce of prohibition enforcement in the district. He criticized the attitude of powerful influences in the national capital, which, he said, are protecting and promoting "the illegal, disgraceful and notorious traffic in booze." He said the "greatest shame and disgrace of it all is that there are many, so we are told, who are high in the official and political life of the nation, people of supposed intelligence, culture and social and financial standing in the city of Washington, who stand back of the bootleggers by patronizing their illegal, contemptible business."

According to Mr. Cooper many enforcement officers have been appointed who are not in sympathy with the law.

FOR ROUGH NECKS.

Daddy, if you know we're hungry, Know that we are very poor, It must break your heart in Heaven 'Cause you never did insure! Mamma wonders why you didn't Save the dimes you threw away; But you felt too strong and healthy For insurance, people say.

You were taken without warning, Leaving us to fight alone; You'd have taken out insurance, Daddy, if you'd only known! 'Twasn't that you didn't love us, I recall how dear you were; But your little girl must suffer 'Cause you failed to save for her!

Mamma just can't make the living! She is wearing out, she said! I shall have to miss some schooling For the sake of daily bread. When she's gone, I guess they'll take me

To a place of charity To be clothed and fed; but, Daddy, It can ne'er be home to me.

Mary's Daddy left insurance, And their home will still be theirs They're not hungry. Sometimes Mary Gives me cast-off clothes she wears. They don't have to take in sewing, Mary's mamma doesn't cry,

AMERICAN LEGION

The East Liverpool Post of the American Legion has agreed to support one German child for each member, during the next six months.

The information was wired to General Chauncey B. Baker, chairman of the Ohio Division of the American Committee for Relief of German Children by Vice Commander William Foulks following a post meeting at which every man present agreed to the plan.

The offer is characteristic of the general spirit of cooperation in the effort to relieve suffering in Germany, being extended by the ex-soldiers, but is the first case of an offer of this kind. In addition the East Liverpool Legionaries who have, about 350 members, constituting one of the strongest and most active posts in the state, will assist in the general campaign in this city.

Due to the efficient system of buying supplies and distributing them the cost of feeding a child in Germany has been reduced to 50c a month so that each member of this post will have the satisfaction of having saved a child's life and the whole expense will be but $3 per man.

A great effort is being made by the American committee to rush supplies into Germany following reports by radio from workers with the American Society of Friends, that a sudden return of winter has greatly increased suffering. In spite of the fact that the entire resources of the society have been thrown into the work only a portion of the relief work has been attempted. Many thousands are being cared for by German relief agencies which are doing many times more work than the foreign agencies but in many sections it has been impossible to establish feeding stations with the limited funds available and it is in these sections that the death and disease rates are unusually high.

MISSED AN OPPORTUNITY.

It looks to an outside observer as if the Democratic leaders in the national house of representatives, in their eagerness to gain a political advantage on the tax reduction measure had overreached themselves. Finding that the Mellon plan was unacceptable to the insurgent Republicans the Democrats, under Representative Garner, of Texas, prepared a measure radically different from the Mellon plan and which, they thought, would appeal to the insurgents.

It was the desire of the leaders to push thru this measure in order that the party might go before the people in the coming presidential election with the declaration that tax reduction was due to Democratic action. This claim has now been taken from them and tax reduction will be presented as part of the Republican thunder. This came about because the regular Republicans offered a compromise bill, the insurgents deserted the Democrats, abandoned the Garner measure and voted for the Longworth compromise.

It would seem as if the Democrats ought to know by this time that they cannot depend on Republican promise even though they be insurgents. They have been "double crossed" once more. It would have been better politics for the Democratic congressmen to have regarded tax reduction as an absolutely non-partisan measure, as it is, and to have effected a compromise with the regular Republicans, which could easily have been done.

In that event the insurgents would have been negligible and a measure would have been passed, which could not have been passed without Democratic aid. Then the Democratic party could have gone out and said with truth that tax reduction came about thru their aid, that the regular Republicans were helpless until Democrats came to the aid of the people and effected the passage of a tax reduction measure. Without them it could not have been done.

As it is they have missed an opportunity. The insurgents played them false, as might have been expected, and now all the credit for tax reduction will be claimed by the Republicans.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

WILL DELIVER MAIL
VIA THE NORTH POLENorway to Accept Cards on Top of World

New York.—Arrangements for the first aerial mail service "via the North pole" to be inaugurated as a part of the air polar expedition, headed by Capt. Roald Amundsen next summer, were announced in a cablegram from the discoverer of the South pole received in New York recently.

The Norwegian government, the cable said, has agreed to accept at the post office at Spitzbergen, where the expedition hops off, specially stamped post cards issued in commemoration of the event, which are to be canceled at the North pole and then delivered by regular mail to all parts of the world.

Proceeds from the sale of these souvenir cards, which it is believed will command high values from stamp collectors, will go to defray expenses of the Amundsen expedition. Their sale in the United States has been undertaken by the Wanamaker stores in New York and Philadelphia as a special service for Captain Amundsen, who is now in Norway contemplating arrangements for the flight.

The polar post cards are unique in that they are the only cards ever issued which will carry the postage stamps of two governments. They also bear prominently across their face the legend: "Delivery subject to accidents beyond our control." This attempt to reach the North pole is to be made by a squadron of four airplanes, or flying boats, which are being specially constructed at the Dornier works, at Friedrichshafen, Germany.

They are built of a special metal, and the hulls are so constructed that the planes will be able to take off equally well from water, ice or snow.

Each plane is to be equipped with a wireless receiving and sending set with an estimated range of 400 to 500 miles. With relays from the expedition's mother ship and various other bases established on the polar ice sheet, Captain Amundsen expects wireless messages of the arrival at the pole to reach New York within a few hours.

Lieut. Ralph Davidson, United States navy, who has been assigned by Secretary Denby as America's representative and who will pilot one of the planes, is now on his way to Switzerland to make tests of landing and taking off on ice and snow.

Miss Annie Peck Seeks
New Peaks to Scale

New York.—Although well past sixty, Miss Annie S. Peck, above, the world's foremost woman mountain climber, is looking for new heights to scale. She recently returned from a four months' expedition through South America, gathering material for her lectures and books. Miss Peck became famous in 1895 when she reached the top of the Swiss Matterhorn, after many people had been killed trying to accomplish the same feat. In 1908 she was the first and only person ever to reach the top of Mount Hucaran, in Peru, 21,812 feet high, the greatest altitude in North and South America. Now she would scale a few more peaks should someone agree to finance the expedition.

Insects Imported to Fight Orchard Plague

Montreal.—New Zealand is about to make an experiment in interfering with the balance of nature in the interests of her fruit-growing industry. The Dominion authorities in England recently dispatched to the Nelson district, which is suffering from a plague of earwigs, a consignment of several hundred of these insects in the hope of wiping out the domestic pest by these importations.

The insects were shipped in specially constructed wooden cages and were fed throughout their 10,000-mile voyage on lettuce and fruit.

STARS AND STRIPES

And Quaker Mission Only Hope of Little, Helpless German Children.

"The only flag the starving children of Germany have is the Stars and Stripes and the American Quaker mission is their only hope," George E. Leach, mayor of Minneapolis and a colonel in the 151st Field Artillery during the war who recently returned home from a visit to Germany said in a statement to General Chauncey B. Baker, chairman of the Ohio division of the American Committee for Relief of German Children.

"The misery I saw among the middle classes of Berlin beggars description but nothing has ever touched my heart so much as the condition of the children, blameless as they are for their condition, never having known anything but hunger and want," Mayor Leach said.

"Regardless of the political situation, regardless of the government's own ability or lack of ability to help, regardless of any cause excusable or not, they are entitled to the sympathy of the world and especially of America where above all, God has been so generous to his children.

"I ask the people of America to consider:

"If your child went to school this morning without having had food for 24 hours.

"If your child could go to school because he was without shoes.

"If your child had to eat today only a carrot or a bit of turnip or some cold potatoes.

"If you saw your boy growing up to only half his normal stature, probably with rickets, curvature of the spine or consumption because you could not give him the most simple ration of milks and fats.

"This is the condition of 2,000,000 children who are without hope, knowing nothing but starvation since they were born and facing the most extreme starvation this spring unless help comes."

TIMELY POULTRY NOTES.

Now is the time to arrange for April hatched chicks which will make the best winter layers.

If your incubator is being operated in a room with uniform temperature and well ventilated, it will give better hatches.

Be sure your breeding stock has plenty of meat scraps or ground bone and vegetables, sprouted oats or green material. These elements help produce better fertility and stronger chicks.

The best perches are not more than two feet from the floor, all on the same level to prevent crowding, and movable so that they may be easily kept clean.

Observe which hens are the best layers and breed from them.

No one kind of grain will give as good results as a variety.

If you haven't a grinder, get some fresh bone and chop it fine for the hens. It beats nothing all to pieces but better buy a grinder if possible. You can get a good one for $10.

The smaller and more crowded the house, the cleaner it must be kept.—Farm Life.

COOPER RAPS VIOLATORS

Would Place Prohibition Enforcement Under a Single Head.

Washington, March 3.—Representative Cooper of Ohio would take the whole enforcement of prohibition away from the "politicians" and place it in the hands of some department of government under a single head which would be held responsible. He holds the work of prohibition officials difficult enough without being complicated because of "political obligations and entanglements."

Mr. Cooper in a speech in the house attacked the society bootleggers and politicians, who he charged are making a farce of prohibition enforcement in the district. He criticized the attitude of powerful influences in the national capital, which, he said, are protecting and promoting "the illegal, disgraceful and notorious traffic in booze." He said the "greatest shame and disgrace of it all is that there are many, so we are told, who are high in the official and political life of the nation, people of supposed intelligence, culture and social and financial standing in the city of Washington, who stand back of the bootleggers by patronizing their illegal, contemptible business."

According to Mr. Cooper many enforcement officers have been appointed who are not in sympathy with the law.

AMUSEMENTS

Pola Negri, celebrated Paramount star, may yet play the role of a true American girl. She nearly does so in "The Cheat," her second American-made picture. In "Bella Donna," the first of the American made photoplays she appeared as an Englishwoman and the action of the story carried her across Europe to the great desert of Egypt. In "The Cheat" the beautiful star creates the character of a Latin-American girl, who by marriage and adoption becomes a citizen of the United States.

The story of this great picture which comes to the Met theater today for a three days' run carries the heroine from Paris to New York in a whirlwind elopement with a young American. The girl was engaged to a wealthy man in Buenos Aires and she attracted the attention of a crook disguised as a rich Hindoo prince. The latter follows her to America despite her marriage.

Loses Heavily at Roulette

In New York she is forced by her husband's circumstances to live in comparative poverty. The false Hindoo induces her to gamble at roulette and she wins at first, starting her on a career of extravagant spending. Later she loses and eventually misappropriates the funds of a charitable benefit which were intrusted to her.

Pola Negri in the Paramount Picture "The Cheat" A George Fitzmaurice Production

The self-styled friend lends her $10,000 to extricate herself from her difficulties on condition that she dine with him alone. Just after this bargain has been reached, the husband puts across a lumber deal, which yields him a fortune and he presents his wife with a substantial bank account. She hastens to the "prince" with a check for the amount she owes him. But he refuses to accept the check, declaring that he wants her and not her money.

Brands Her as a Cheat.

When she attempts to escape, he calls her a cheat, drags her to him and brands her on the shoulder with his seal. She seizes a revolver and shoots him, making her escape before she is discovered. Meanwhile her husband follows her to the apartment of the prince and arrives a moment after she has escaped. Finding the "prince" wounded and his wife's check on the floor, he destroys the check and assumes responsibility for the crime. He is tried and convicted but at the last minute his wife takes the witness stand, bares her branded shoulder to the jury and saves her husband. The crook narrowly escapes being mobbed at the conclusion of her story.

Hector Turnbull wrote the story of "The Cheat." The screen version was written by Ouida Bergere and the feature was produced by George Fitzmaurice. Jack Holt plays the role of the husband and Charles de Roche popular French actor, portrays the counterfeit Hindoo prince. The supporting cast is excellent.

TOURNAMENT

Basketball Enthusiasts Fill the C. A. C. Gym to Overflowing.

The County Basketball tournament, the annual athletic event, drew one of the largest crowds of students to this city that has been here for many a day. There were over two thousand admissions during the three periods of the games.

The big gym of the C. A. C. was crowded with a merry bunch of rooters, who cheered their respective schools to victory. Their school yells and calls made the welkin ring with enthusiasm and the audience was made up of a mirthful joyous lot of school kids, who enjoyed themselves to their heart's content.

The games played last Saturday are known as the preliminaries and next Saturday during the day time, the semi-final games will be played. The final games will be played Saturday night and promises to be exciting, as the schools that will take part, will use every strategy known to basketball to win. The ones who will carry off the honors will strive hard to win, as it is no mean honor, and is looked forward to by athletic enthusiasts all over the county.

The results of the last Saturday games are as follows: Boys' schedule; morning games, Perry, 29; Monroe, 11; Pickaway, 10; Washington, 8. Girls schedule; Muhlenberg, 5; Perry, 12.

Afternoon games: Boys', Ashville, 26; Deer creek, 10; Walnut, 9; Salt, 31; Scioto, 49, Derby, 10. Girls' Ashville, 11; Walnut, 10; Monroe, 13; Deer creek, 12. Evening games; Boys' Muhlenberg, 10; New Holland, 13; Perry, 14; Jackson, 11. Girls' Scioto, 2; Atlanta, 12; Washington, 2; forfeit, Darby 0.

The contenders to play next Saturday are: Boys, Pickaway-Ashville, Salter creek, Scioto, New Holland, Atlanta in the afternoon. Afternoon, Girls' Ashville, Monroe, Washington, Atlanta. Night schedule, a game will be played by boys and girls.

This is the third consecutive year for the referees of the tournament: M. C. Myers, of Washington C. H.; Mendal A. Keith, of Columbus. Scorer, L. M. Shoup, principal of Ashville schools. Timekeeper, George McDowell, superintendent of Jackson centralized schools.

HOUSE BURNED

Flames Destroyed Building on Smith Farm Near South Bloomfield.

The home of Daniel Rowe on the Robert Smith farm, north of South Bloomfield was destroyed by fire about 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

The flames were discovered by a young man driving a Ford car coming south on the Columbus pike. He stopped ran into the house and notified the family. The roof of the house caught fire from sparks that fell on it and the entire roof was ablaze before the family learned of the danger.

Mr. Rowe saved most of his household goods but his loss is considerable. The house an old seven room structure stands near the road. The property formerly belonged to the Robert Smith estate and is now owned by Mrs. Ellen Renick Patterson of Hillsboro.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson F. Reichelderfer will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Salt creek township, Wednesday, March 5. Only members of the family will participate in the celebration.

TAX SETTLEMENTS IN

Decline In Surplus In State Treasury to Begin This Week.

Columbus, March 3.—State Treasurer Day stated the present week will mark the beginning of the decline in the $33,000,000 surplus in the state treasury. Practically all the county tax settlements are in and from now on there will be little income. Abolishment of direct levies for state taxes made a decided decrease in the funds received from the counties. In one instance, at least, the state, instead of receiving money, must pay. Morgan county last year returned $14,169.23 to the state. This year the state must pay the county $161. This money will be paid as interest on funds derived from the sale of county school lands and deposited with the state. The fund draws interest at 6 per cent. forever.

Tells of Being Captured by Horde of Cannibals

Sir Harry H. Johnston, explorer, linguist, diplomatist, who cut a large figure in the extension of British dominion in Africa, tells in his new book, "The Story of My Life," many interesting stories of his experience with wild tribes of the Dark Continent. On a canoe trip up the Cross river, he relates how "a horde of excited people, armed with guns and spears, waded out into the river and compelled the canoe to stop, in fact dragged it summarily into shallow water. Three or four lusty savages pulled me out of the canoe, mounted me on the shoulders of the biggest, and carried me off at a run to the town, where I was put in a hut with the door open. Here I had to submit to be stared at for many an hour by hundreds of inquisitive savages, unaware as to the fate of my Kumbos and Elk servants. Almost over my head, hanging from the smoke-blackened rafters of the house, was a smoked human ham, black and bluish green. About a hundred skulls were ranged round the upper part of the clay walls in a ghastly frieze."

The explorer went through the form of making a treaty with the chiefs, but finding that "a great deal of palm wine had been drunk" cut short his visit after he had made presents of cloth and beads. The chief men of the town "insisted on giving a return present—a hundred yams and two sheep, and at parting an old chief or medicine man bestowed on me a necklace of human knuckle-bones from his own neck."—New York World.

That Explained It

An old farmer and his wife drove to market one very wet day. Large pools of water had formed in the roadway between the farm and the town. On the return journey he met an old friend.

"And how are you today?" was the friendly greeting.

"Very well, thank you," answered the farmer.

"How is the wife?" continued the friend.

"Fine," said the farmer. "She's behind there"—jerked his thumb toward the back of the wagon.

"She's not there!" exclaimed the astonished friend.

The farmer turned and looked over his shoulder. Then he said coolly: "Humph! That accounts for the splash."

He'd Say It Was

A man traveling in a train that had made several abrupt stops and sudden jerks, became a bit anxious. There had been numerous accidents on the line of late, so he had been told, and there was cause for fear. Calling the porter aside, he said: "George, is this train safe?"

"Safe as any, suh."

George's grin extended from ear to ear.

"Block system, suh? Why, boss, we have de greatest block system in de world. Ten miles back we was blocked by a mule. Just now we were blocked by a cow, and I reckon when we gets farther South we'll be blocked by an alligator. Block system, suh? Well, I'll say it is!"

A Little Fable

Destiny took a man from an obscure position and gave him a $5,000 job. He became very arrogant. A $25,000 position becoming vacant in the same office, Destiny gave it to another. Whereat the first man railed bitterly, and for once Destiny condescended to reply to mortal.

"I had you in line," quoth Destiny, "for big things, and was watching to see how you would act. If you swelled up over a $5,000 job what would you have done with a $25,000 position?"—Louisville Courier-Journal.

His Mistake

A magnificently attired washerwoman drove up in her limousine and delivered to a young professional man his weekly wash. He examined it, and then said, timidly:

"Excuse me, madam, but I'm afraid you've made a mistake. You've kept my shirt and, instead, you've brought me these very dilapidated old handkerchiefs."

The washerwoman looked into the parcel angrily.

"Pshaw!" she sniffed. "Them ain't handkerchiefs—them's your shirts."

A Salesman

A young salesman, who claimed that a good salesman could make a living anywhere, tried it out in Rome. But he was soon back in America.

"What was the matter, Frank?" asked a friend. "Couldn't you pick up the language?"

"Oh, I had plenty of that, but the situation was too complicated for me. I tried to sell a pink shirt to a Fascist and he took it for an attack on his politics."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Hotel Stenographer

BY ROE FULKERSON

"He won't do," said the Hotel Stenographer, as Kelly's friend went away from her desk. "For the love of Mike," said the House Detective.

"You never saw him before. That's a woman. Judge a man in a minute, and condemn him," Kelly was indignant.

"Listen, Kelly," answered the girl. "You may be a great detective and able to catch the bootleggers and hotel beats who prow around the caravansary, but when it comes to judging a man, right off the bat, leave it to a woman."

"You've had a lot of experience kid" jeered the House Detective.

"Men are all alike," said the girl. "Any girl with her first man has a dictionary to an unknown language. Thru him she knows all men."

"They all have the same line."

"They all toss a compliment or two to a girl, like you toss a bone to a dog, and then start in to tell you what wonders they are. All they want to talk about is themselves."

"That bird you just introduced me to left here with the impression that my heart was palpitating like that of a sparrow caught by a cat, all because he told me I had beautiful blue eyes. I haven't met a man since I was 14 who hasn't told me the same thing."

"They are all alike Kelly, except some of them are a little bit more so. He was one of that kind."

AMUSEMENTS

Pola Negri, celebrated Paramount star, may yet play the role of a true American girl. She nearly does so in "The Cheat," her second American-made picture. In "Bella Donna," the first of the American made photoplays she appeared as an Englishwoman and the action of the story carried her across Europe to the great desert of Egypt. In "The Cheat" the beautiful star creates the character of a Latin-American girl, who by marriage and adoption becomes a citizen of the United States.

The story of this great picture which comes to the Met theater today for a three days' run carries the heroine from Paris to New York in a whirlwind elopement with a young American. The girl was engaged to a wealthy man in Buenos Aires and she attracted the attention of a crook disguised as a rich Hindoo prince. The latter follows her to America despite her marriage.

Loses Heavily at Roulette
In New York she is forced by her husband's circumstances to live in comparative poverty. The false Hindoo induces her to gamble at roulette and she wins at first, starting her on a career of extravagant spending. Later she loses and eventually misappropriates the funds of a charitable benefit which were intrusted to her.

Pola Negri in the Paramount Picture "The Cheat" A George Fitzmaurice Production

The self-styled friend lends her $10,000 to extricate herself from her difficulties on condition that she dine with him alone. Just after this bargain has been reached, the husband puts across a lumber deal, which yields him a fortune and he presents his wife with a substantial bank account. She hastens to the "prince" with a check for the amount she owes him. But he refuses to accept the check, declaring that he wants her and not her money.

Erands Her as a Cheat.
When she attempts to escape, he calls her a cheat, drags her to him and brands her on the shoulder with his seal. She seizes a revolver and shoots him, making her escape before she is discovered. Meanwhile her husband follows her to the apartment of the prince and arrives a moment after she has escaped. Finding the "prince" wounded and his wife's check on the floor, he destroys the check and assumes responsibility for the crime. He is tried and convicted but at the last minute his wife takes the witness stand, bares her branded shoulder to the jury and saves her husband. The crook narrowly escapes being mobbed at the conclusion of her story.

Hector Turnbull wrote the story of "The Cheat." The screen version was written by Ouida Bergere and the feature was produced by George Fitzmaurice. Jack Holt plays the role of the husband and Charles de Roche popular French actor, portrays the counterfeit Hindoo prince. The supporting cast is excellent.

TOURNAMENT

Basketball Enthusiasts Fill the C. A. C. Gym to Overflowing.

The County Basketball tournament, the annual athletic event, drew one of the largest crowds of students to this city that has been here for many a day. There were over two thousand admissions during the three periods of the games.

The big gym of the C. A. C. was crowded with a merry bunch of rooters, who cheered their respective schools to victory. Their school yells and calls made the welkin ring with enthusiasm and the audience was made up of a mirthful joyous lot of school kids, who enjoyed themselves to their heart's content.

The games played last Saturday are known as the preliminaries and next Saturday during the day time, the semi-final games will be played. The final games will be played Saturday night and promises to be exciting, as the schools that will take part, will use every strategy known to basketball to win. The ones who will carry off the honors will strive hard to win, as it is no mean honor, and is looked forward to by athletic enthusiasts all over the county.

The results of the last Saturday games are as follows: Boys' schedule; morning games, Perry, 29; Monroe, 11; Pickaway, 10; Washington, 8. Girls' schedule; Muhlenberg, 5; Perry, 12.

Afternoon games: Boys' Ashville, 26; Deercreek, 10; Walnut, 9; Salt, 31; Scioto, 49; Derby, 10. Girls' Ashville, 11; Walnut, 10; Monroe, 13; Deercreek, 12. Evening games; Boys' Muhlenberg, 10; New Holland, 13; Perry, 14; Jackson, 11. Girls' Scioto, 2; Atlanta, 12; Washington, 2; forfeit, Darby 0.

The contenders to play next Saturday are: Boys, Pickaway-Ashville, Saltcreek, Scioto, New Holland, Atlanta in the afternoon. Afternoon, Girls' Ashville, Monroe, Washington, Atlanta. Night schedule, a game will be played by boys and girls.

This is the third consecutive year for the referees of the tournament: M. C. Myers, of Washington C. H.; Mendal A. Keith, of Columbus. Scorer, L. M. Shoup, principal of Ashville schools. Timekeeper, George McDowell, superintendent of Jackson centralized schools.

HOUSE BURNED

Flames Destroyed Building on Smith Farm Near South Bloomfield.

The home of Daniel Rowe on the Robert Smith farm, north of South Bloomfield was destroyed by fire about 7:30 o'clock Sunday morning.

The flames were discovered by a young man driving a Ford car coming south on the Columbus pike. He stopped ran into the house and notified the family. The roof of the house caught fire from sparks that fell on it and the entire roof was ablaze before the family learned of the danger.

Mr. Rowe saved most of his household goods but his loss is considerable. The house an old seven room structure stands near the road. The property formerly belonged to the Robert Smith estate and is now owned by Mrs. Ellen Renick Patterson of Hillsboro.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson F. Reichelderfer will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary at their home in Saltcreek township, Wednesday, March 5. Only members of the family will participate in the celebration.

TAX SETTLEMENTS IN

Decline In Surplus In State Treasury to Begin This Week.

Columbus, March 3.—State Treasurer Day stated the present week will mark the beginning of the decline in the $33,000,000 surplus in the state treasury. Practically all the county tax settlements are in and from now on there will be little income. Abolishment of direct levies for state taxes made a decided decrease in the funds received from the counties. In one instance, at least, the state, instead of receiving money, must pay. Morgan county last year returned $14,169.23 to the state. This year the state must pay the county $161. This money will be paid as interest on funds derived from the sale of county school lands and deposited with the state. The fund draws interest at 6 per cent forever.

Tells of Being Captured by Horde of Cannibals

Sir Harry H. Johnston, explorer, linguist, diplomatist, who cut a large figure in the extension of British dominion in Africa, tells in his new book, "The Story of My Life," many interesting stories of his experience with wild tribes of the Dark Continent. On a canoe trip up the Cross river, he relates how "a horde of excited people, armed with guns and spears, waded out into the river and compelled the canoe to stop, in fact dragged it summarily into shallow water. Three or four lusty savages pulled me out of the canoe, mounted me on the shoulders of the biggest, and carried me off at a run to the town, where I was put in a hut with the door open. Here I had to submit to be stared at for many an hour by hundreds of inquisitive savages, unaware as to the fate of my Kruboy and Elk servants. Almost over my head, hanging from the smoke-blackened rafters of the house, was a smoked human ham, black and bluish green. About a hundred skulls were ranged round the upper part of the clay walls in a ghastly frieze."

The explorer went through the form of making a treaty with the chiefs, but finding that "a great deal of palm wine had been drunk" cut short his visit after he had made presents of cloth and beads. The chief men of the town "insisted on giving a return present—a hundred yams and two sheep, and at parting an old chief or medicine man bestowed on me a necklace of human knuckle-bones from his own neck."—New York World.

That Explained It

An old farmer and his wife drove to market one very wet day. Large pools of water had formed in the roadway between the farm and the town. On the return journey he met an old friend.

"And how are you today?" was the friendly greeting.

"Very well, thank you," answered the farmer.

"How is the wife?" continued the friend.

"Fine," said the farmer. "She's behind there"—jerkng his thumb toward the back of the wagon.

"She's not there!" exclaimed the astonished friend.

The farmer turned and looked over his shoulder. Then he said coolly: "Humph! That accounts for the splash."

He'd Say It Was

A man traveling in a train that had made several abrupt stops and sudden jerks, became a bit anxious. There had been numerous accidents on the line of late, so he had been told, and there was cause for fear. Calling the porter aside, he said: "George, is this train safe?"

"Safe as any, suh."

George's grin extended from ear to ear.

"Block system, suh? Why, boss, we have de greatest block system in de world. Ten miles back we was blocked by a mule. Just now we were blocked by a cow, and I reckon when we gets farther South we'll be blocked by an alligator. Block system, suh? Well, I'll say it is!"

THAT RING WAS WORTH ITS COST

By DOROTHY BROMLEY

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

BILL'S landlady was calling him from his room. "Telephone, Mr. Hooper."

"This is Alice, Bill," came the voice from the receiver. "Can you come over for a moment right away on a matter of business?" The last few words were emphasized.

"Sure," said Bill. "But what's up?"

"I—I can't tell you now, but will you come?"

"Sure!"

The janitor was just lighting the lamp in the vestibule of the apartment house as Bill entered. Alice opened the door of her apartment before he had a chance to ring.

"Bill," she said, "I have just had a telegram that—that my father is sick, and I must go home tonight. But—well, to come to the point—I haven't the money to buy the railroad ticket, and my account at the bank wouldn't stand a check until after I deposit a check I received today, which is too large to cash anywhere else. Bill, can you lend me $10 to go home on, and keep this as security until I return?"

"Sure thing," returned Bill, reaching into his pocket. "I can give you the money, all right, but I don't want the ring. I'd lose it."

"But, Bill, I won't take the money unless you take the ring. I don't want a loan on faith. Please, Bill, take the ring, because I must make that train. And I will redeem it as soon as I can get to a bank with the check I have."

The ring was forced into his hand and Bill gave her the money.

A moment later Bill found himself, rather mystified, walking home along the brilliantly lighted street, the ring still clutched in his hand. It was too small for him to wear, and he feared that if he kept it in his pocket or in his room it might be lost. A solution to this problem came suddenly, when, passing the shop of a pawnbroker, Bill realized that he could leave the ring there and be sure of getting it back when Alice returned from home. He went in.

The man back of the counter examined the jewel. "How much do you want? Twenty-five dollars?"

Bill reasoned he'd only spend the extra money. "No," he said. "Give me ten."

Ten seconds later traffic in the street was tied up and a street car motor-man was lifting Bill's inert form into an automobile, which whisked away to the nearest hospital.

Alice's father's illness kept her home much longer than she had expected to be kept. She addressed a letter to Bill, enclosing a check for the $10 and requesting a return of the ring, but Bill's former landlady, thoughtlessly, returned the letter to Alice unopened, there being stamped on the return envelope the information that the one addressed was unknown.

When Bill, much changed from the results of his accident, was released from the hospital, the swift seasons had traversed half way round the calendar. At first Bill had been unable to write, due to an injury to his arm, but when that member had improved sufficiently he had decided to wait until he could call personally upon Alice to tell her of the loss of the pawn ticket and to explain that he would make an effort to recover the ring as soon as it had spent its legal time in the pawn shop.

After re-establishing himself in his old job, his old room, and his old habitat in general, Bill made bold to visit the pawnbroker. "Yes, I know," the man told him, much to Bill's astonishment. "That ticket was returned by a young lady. I wouldn't cheat you. I'll give you the ring for $10 and interest."

So Bill received back the ring. His next move was to call Alice's old telephone number, and he was surprised again when she answered it.

"Alice," he told her, "this is Bill. Remember?"

"I should say I do," she replied.

"May I see you right away on a matter of business?" he asked, trying to give the words the same inflection that she had given them the night of the accident.

"Why, yes, Bill, come right up." And Bill lost no time about it. It even began to look, he told himself, as though he might get his old girl back.

They spent the first 10 minutes explaining all that had happened.

"I know how the pawnbroker got the ticket," said Alice. "A girl friend of mine picked up the ticket in front of the shop just after I went home, and went in from curiosity to see what had been pawned. The ring looked so much like mine she told me about it and I went to see it. But the man wouldn't give it to us because he said it had been left by a man, and he didn't think it was ours. I had about given it up. I couldn't imagine what had become of you."

"Well," said Bill, "you'd better let me give you back the ring."

"All right," said Alice, "and let me return your $10." She extended her right hand for Bill to return the ring.

"Alice, I—I—," he stammered, "I'd like to buy you a ring like this, but—doctor's bills are expensive and I can't, right now. But I'd like to put this one in your other hand."

"Bill," she cooed, "only on one condition—that you use the $10 to pay me minister!"

AUTO OWNERS LISTEN.

Radiolite is coming into its own. Better get the Radiolite men to install Radiolite before you hear those "cheerful" words which every motorist has heard so often: "Your battery won't take the charge. You need a new one." A word to the wise ought to be enough. Some day Radiolite will be in your battery—why not now? Why wait until your battery becomes corroded and unfit for service. Install Radiolite now and prolong its life and at the same time get the best of service from it.

THAT RING WAS WORTH ITS COST

By DOROTHY BROMLEY

BILL'S landlady was calling him from his room. "Telephone, Mr. Hooper."

"This is Alice, Bill," came the voice from the receiver. "Can you come over for a moment right away on a matter of business?" The last few words were emphasized.

"Sure," said Bill. "But what's up?" "I—I can't tell you now, but will you come?"

"Sure!" The janitor was just lighting the lamp in the vestibule of the apartment house as Bill entered. Alice opened the door of her apartment before he had a chance to ring.

"Bill," she said, "I have just had a telegram that—that my father is sick, and I must go home tonight. But—well, to come to the point—I haven't the money to buy the railroad ticket, and my account at the bank wouldn't stand a check until after I deposit a check I received today, which is too large to cash anywhere else. Bill, can you lend me $10 to go home on, and keep this as security until I return?"

"Sure thing," returned Bill, reaching into his pocket. "I can give you the money, all right, but I don't want the ring. I'd lose it."

"But, Bill, I won't take the money unless you take the ring. I don't want a loan on faith. Please, Bill, take the ring, because I must make that train. And I will redeem it as soon as I can get to a bank with the check I have."

The ring was forced into his hand and Bill gave her the money. A moment later Bill found himself, rather mystified, walking home along the brilliantly lighted street, the ring still clutched in his hand. It was too small for him to wear, and he feared that if he kept it in his pocket or in his room it might be lost. A solution to this problem came suddenly, when, passing the shop of a pawnbroker, Bill realized that he could leave the ring there and be sure of getting it back when Alice returned from home. He went in.

The man back of the counter examined the jewel. "How much do you want? Twenty-five dollars?"

Bill reasoned he'd only spend the extra money. "No," he said. "Give me ten."

Bill left the shop, examining the pawn ticket in his hand, and started across the street to a cigar store. Ten seconds later traffic in the street was tied up and a street car motor-man was lifting Bill's inert form into an automobile, which whisked away to the nearest hospital.

Alice's father's illness kept her home much longer than she had expected to be kept. She addressed a letter to Bill, enclosing a check for the $10 and requesting a return of the ring, but Bill's former landlady, thoughtlessly, returned the letter to Alice unopened, there being stamped on the return envelope the information that the one addressed was unknown.

When Bill, much changed from the results of his accident, was released from the hospital, the swift seasons had traversed half way round the calendar. At first Bill had been unable to write, due to an injury to his arm, but when that member had improved sufficiently he had decided to wait until he could call personally upon Alice to tell her of the loss of the pawn ticket and to explain that he would make an effort to recover the ring as soon as it had spent its legal time in the pawn shop.

After re-establishing himself in his old job, his old room, and his old habitat in general, Bill made bold to visit the pawnbroker. "Yes, I know," the man told him, much to Bill's astonishment. "That ticket was returned by a young lady. I wouldn't cheat you. I'll give you the ring for $10 and interest."

So Bill received back the ring. His next move was to call Alice's old telephone number, and he was surprised again when she answered it.

"Alice," he told her, "this is Bill. Remember?"

"I should say I do," she replied. "May I see you right away on a matter of business?" he asked, trying to give the words the same inflection that she had given them the night of the accident.

"Why, yes, Bill, come right up." And Bill lost no time about it. It even began to look, he told himself, as though he might get his old girl back. They spent the first 10 minutes explaining all that had happened.

"I know how the pawnbroker got the ticket," said Alice. "A girl friend of mine picked up the ticket in front of the shop just after I went home, and went in from curiosity to see what had been pawned. The ring looked so much like mine she told me about it and I went to see it. But the man wouldn't give it to us because he said it had been left by a man, and he didn't think it was ours. I had about given it up. I couldn't imagine what had become of you."

"Well," said Bill, "you'd better let me give you back the ring."

"All right," said Alice, "and let me return your $10." She extended her right hand for Bill to return the ring.

"Alice, I—I—" he stammered, "I'd like to buy you a ring like this, but—doctor's bills are expensive and I can't, right now. But I'd like to put this one in your other hand."

Secretary of Agriculture Takes Interest in Boys' and Girls' Work

A Quartet of Red Heads—Secretary Wallace and Three Club Members From One Family.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The fact that there are more than 500,000 members of boys' and girls' agricultural clubs in the United States does not prevent Secretary of Agriculture Wallace from taking a keen personal interest in what many of these youngsters are doing with their calves, pigs, chickens, gardens, and in canning and other home work. The secretary writes many letters to club members who have done particularly good work, and in return he receives many letters with details of the work they are doing and invitations to "come on out and look over our stock."

Secretary Receives a Letter.

Recently the secretary wrote a congratulatory letter to two Iowa club boys who had been successful with their cattle at the state fair. In reply he received the following letter signed "Cook Bros, per Cecil Cook":

"Dear Mr. Wallace: We were very glad to receive your letter of congratulation in regard to the calf club work. After showing at Des Moines we came back to Hardin county fair and were first in Hereford class and grand champion baby beef on the calf you mentioned. We also got first, second and third on Shorthorns. We also showed at the Central Iowa fair at Marshalltown last week, getting third on Hereford, showing against Yost and Cassidy; and first, second and third on Shorthorns. The Hereford was within about top of the sale at Marshall. Two of our Shorthorns brought $14 per hundred, being the high selling Shorthorns of the sale. You are heartily invited to come out to see us whenever you are in Iowa or out this way."

All Four Red Heads.

Greenhouse Products in Increasing Demand

Glass Farming Has Become Important Industry.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Glass farming, or the growing of flowers and vegetables in greenhouses, has become an important industry in the United States, and according to the United States Department of Agriculture, the industry is constantly increasing because of the demand for vegetable and floral products of the quality that can be produced in the modern greenhouse. There are now more than 17,000 establishments employing some type of forcing structure for the production of plants, flowers, or vegetables, the glass area covering nearly 3,500 acres.

High-quality greenhouse products are finding an increased demand, and the industry offers special inducements to those having a knowledge of and a liking for the work. Success in this industry will depend much on the suitability and adequacy of the equipment. The fact that the quantity of coal used to maintain an acre of space inclosed in greenhouses at the required temperatures varies from 250 to 500 tons a season, indicates the need for the practice of every possible economy. According to Farmers' Bulletin No. 1318, Greenhouse Construction and Heating, just published by the United States Department of Agriculture, fuel losses in greenhouse heating are sustained because of poorly constructed houses, a faulty heating system, or the lack of repair of the house or the heating plant.

This bulletin discusses the construction and heating of greenhouses, giving such information as will be useful to those contemplating engaging in the business, and may be secured free of charge from the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Profitable Stock Gains Made by Using Protein

Economical gains on cattle require a certain amount of protein. If clover or alfalfa hay is used as the entire roughage, additional protein need not be fed unless one ton of such protein rich feed as cottonseed meal or linseed meal, costs less than the value of three tons of alfalfa or clover. If alfalfa or clover is available, or is available as only a part of the roughage ration, more economical gains can be made by using a limited amount of cottonseed meal.

Control Fall Army Worm by Using Poisoned Bait

Jeff Davis' Tribute to President Grant

From the new ten-volume edition of the letters and papers of Jefferson Davis, lately issued by the Mississippi department of archives and history, the Review of Reviews reprints the following letter written in 1885:

"Dear Sir: Your request on behalf of a Boston Journalist for me to prepare a criticism of General Grant's military career cannot be complied with for the following reasons:

"1. General Grant is dying.

"2. Though he invaded our country ruthlessly, it was with open hand, and, as far as I know, he abetted neither arson nor pillage, and has, since the war, I believe, shown no malignity to Confederates, either of the military or civil service.

"Therefore, instead of seeking to disturb the quiet of his closing hours, I would, if it were in my power, contribute to the peace of his mind and the comfort of his body."

"JEFFERSON DAVIS."

We do not know the identity of the "Boston Journalist," says the Boston Herald. The request for the criticism represented no doubt the enterprise of an ingenious and enterprising newspaper publisher. But of the quality of this letter, written by the former president of the Confederacy four years before his death, there can be no doubt. Reading it today stirs agreeable emotions.

First U. S. Currency Easily Counterfeited

So easily counterfeited were the first lots of paper money issued by the United States government in the sixties that spurious bills flooded the country, and countless astute business men were victimized. Finally, to balk the criminals, a book called "Heath's Infallible Government Counterfeit Detector at Sight" was published in 1870.

In those old days money was printed on ordinary paper, which counterfeiters could easily obtain or imitate and, consequently, such a book as "Heath's Detector," which concentrated on the designs on the bills, was needed. Now, however, a special brand of paper with special water marks, whorls and embedded tiny silk threads, is used. This paper cannot be imitated by the counterfeiters and such a book as the "Detector" is not now needed.

The book, published by Laban Heath & Co. of Boston and Washington, claimed to be "the only infallible method" of detecting counterfeit notes and bonds with "genuine designs (which were mutilated) from original government plates by authority from the United States Treasury department and the American, National and Continental Bank Note companies, New York and Boston."—Detroit News.

One Kind Act

Little Willie was so depressed one night at bed-time that his father asked him what the trouble was. Willie answered sadly that he had failed to perform a single kind action that day, thus going counter to the boy scout ritual.

"Well, cheer up," said his father. "You can perform two kind actions tomorrow."

But Willie doubted if he could make up for his fault in that way, and he turned in very low-spirited indeed. In the morning, however, he was himself again.

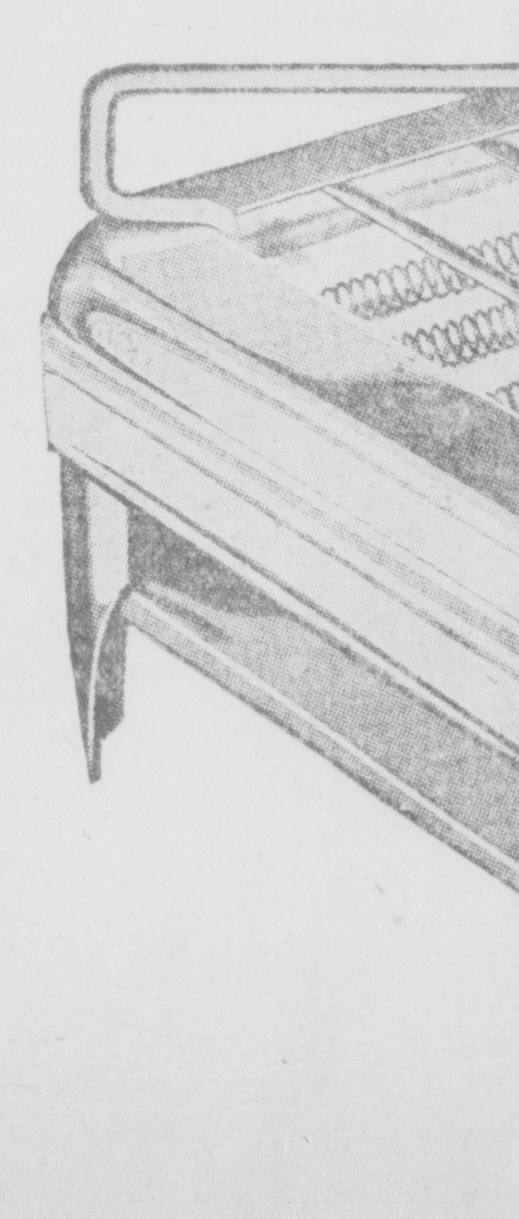

"Got over your troubles, eh?" said his father.

"Yes, sir," said little Willie. "I lay tossing and worrying till 2 o'clock, and then I couldn't stand it no longer, so I sneaked downstairs and gave the canary to the cat."

ANALYSES OF COAL HELP TO OPERATOR

Bureau of Mines Says It Describes Character

Coal analyses help to describe the character of the coal as it lies in the ground or as it may be delivered to the user, states N. H. Snyder, fuel engineer of the Department of the Interior, in a report recently issued by the bureau of mines, Washington. The sampler cuts a channel two by six inches or three by four inches from roof to floor in the face of the seam and excludes from the sample any partings more than three-eighths of an inch thick and any lenses or concretions of sulphur or other impurities more than two inches in maximum diameter and one-half of an inch thick, he adds.

"Analyses of mine samples form a permanent or scientific record of the coal bed at the point sampled; they are important in determining the character of the coal in any given mine or district," Mr. Snyder continues. "These analyses, when the samples are taken in a standardized manner, are valuable to the operator. When compared with analyses of delivered coal they show him whether or not his mine is being efficiently worked or whether the coal is being properly prepared—which involves the question whether he has suitable mechanical appliances for separating the impurities.

"In the purchase of coal, mine samples may serve as a sufficient guide to the experienced purchaser who has knowledge of the impurities in the seam and the degree to which these are eliminated in mining and preparing coal. To the average purchaser, unacquainted with these details, however, dependence on mine samples may be misleading. The quality of coal indicated by the face samples can rarely, if ever, be attained in the delivered coal. Certain impurities that are eliminated from the formally prepared mine sample may not be eliminated by the miner interested in getting out a large tonnage.

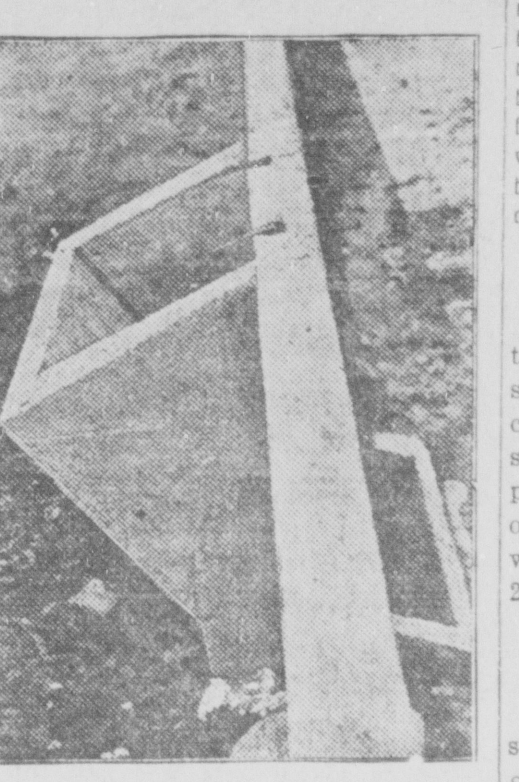

"Some of the roof and floor may also be included if these are soft or flaky. Some mine analyses, particularly those taken from geological reports, may be either from outcrop coal or small workings not beyond the influence of weathering. When coal prices are high and competition is lessened, it is easy for the miner and the management to lower the standards of preparation of the coal, and a return to rigid standards is always difficult.

"In using analyses of samples of delivered coal one must recognize that coal is not always of uniform size and that the impurities are not uniformly distributed throughout the mass. Hence there will be some variation in the results of sampling, and even though the same mass of coal is sampled a number of times, the analyses would not agree absolutely except by chance. It is only when a considerable number of analyses, representing a considerable tonnage mined over a period of time, are available that the average value and range of variation of a particular coal become known with certainty.

"Delivered coal from any given mine may differ from day to day through variations in mining or preparing the coal; hence a record of analysis of delivered coal for any one time should not be considered as a permanent record, for the output may be greatly improved by new methods of mining and preparation; or, on the other hand, the output may deteriorate through carelessness in mining or preparation."

Feeder Prevents Swine From Upsetting Swill

Handy Hog Feeder.

Carrying swill to a bunch of hungry hogs is no small accomplishment, if they are to be kept from upsetting the pail in which it is carried. So an ingenious farmer built a feeder like the one in this illustration. There is no need for a single drop to be spilled.

While it may be built of any material, this one was made of concrete and is serviceable and lasting.

World's Biggest Gem.

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal, discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately 21 cubic inches, weighs 2,572,382 carats and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opal, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,658,927 carats, but has a number of flaws.

Control Fall Army Worm by Using Poisoned Bait

Garden and field crops, grasses and alfalfa are all prone to injury by the fall army worm. The pest may be controlled by using poison bait made by mixing an ounce of white arsenate with a pound of bran moistened with a pint and one-half of water to which have been added three ounces of molasses and the juice and chopped rinds of one-half dozen lemons.

Proper Sowing of Wheat Will Kill Hessian Fly

Wheat sown too soon serves as fall pasture for the Hessian fly, one of the crop's worst enemies, and enables the pest to live over and cut down the wheat crop of the following season. On the other hand, by delaying sowing until after the "fly free" dates, announced locally by county agricultural agents, farmers can break the life cycle of Hessian fly and rid their wheat crop of the pest the year following.

This is because the fly has two life cycles a year. Each cycle, if completed, has four stages. To cut into the succession at any point breaks up the whole business. From eggs laid on the leaves maggots hatch. These maggots feed on wheat stalks near the base of the leaves, sucking juice that should go to make grain, and damaging the stalk so that it breaks and lodges easily. This done, the maggots go into a puparia or flaxseed form that lives on in the soil.

Thus, by concerted late sowing of this crop a county can smash by starvation that fall brood of fly. And without a fall brood there can be no spring brood. But one or two fields of early-seeded wheat can infect a whole locality.

Utilizing Waste Roughage for Bedding Material

On every farm there is a large amount of roughage which is not fit to feed live stock. Sometimes this is in the form of weeds or broom sage; sometimes it is damaged hay or straw. Frequently this material is ignored or thrown in some place where it can never be made use of.

This sort of material makes excellent bedding for all classes of live stock, says Prof. L. V. Sarkey, chief of the animal husbandry division, in discussing the best usages of waste roughages. It absorbs the liquid manure and, when hauled on the fields, adds to the organic matter in the soil. When we take into consideration the fact that more than half the value of manure is in the liquid form, we can easily see how important it is to save the liquid and thus increase the fertility of the soil.

Feeding More Roughage Than Animals Consume

Some make a practice of feeding more roughage than the animals will consume and using what is refused for bedding. This is an extravagant and wasteful practice where good, clean hay is fed. The most successful feeders feed just what roughage the animals will clean up and use for bedding only that roughage which is too inferior to be consumed by the animals.

How a satisfactory poultry house can be made at small expense by placing two plano boxes back to back and covering them with tar roofing paper is told in Farmers' Bulletin 1331, on Back Yard Poultry Keeping, which may be had free on application to the Department of Agriculture at Washington.

Jeff Davis' Tribute to President Grant

From the new ten-volume edition of the letters and papers of Jefferson Davis, lately issued by the Mississippi department of archives and history, the Review of Reviews reprints the following letter written in 1885:

"Dear Sir: Your request on behalf of a Boston Journalist for me to prepare a criticism of General Grant's military career cannot be complied with for the following reasons:

"1. General Grant is dying.

"2. Though he invaded our country ruthlessly, it was with open hand, and, as far as I know, he abetted neither arson nor pillage, and has, since the war, I believe, shown no malignity to Confederates, either of the military or civil service.

"Therefore, instead of seeking to disturb the quiet of his closing hours, I would, if it were in my power, contribute to the peace of his mind and the comfort of his body.

"JEFFERSON DAVIS."

We do not know the identity of the "Boston Journalist," says the Boston Herald. The request for the criticism represented no doubt the enterprise of an ingenious and enterprising newspaper publisher. But of the quality of this letter, written by the former president of the Confederacy four years before his death, there can be no doubt. Reading it today stirs agreeable emotions.

First U. S. Currency Easily Counterfeited

So easily counterfeited were the first lots of paper money issued by the United States government in the sixties that spurious bills flooded the country, and countless astute business men were victimized. Finally, to balk the criminals, a book called "Heath's Infallible Government Counterfeit Detector at Sight" was published in 1870.

In those old days money was printed on ordinary paper, which counterfeiters could easily obtain or imitate and, consequently, such a book as "Heath's Detector," which concentrated on the designs on the bills, was needed. Now, however, a special brand of paper with special water marks, whorls and embedded tiny silk threads, is used. This paper cannot be imitated by the counterfeiter and such a book as the "Detector" is not now needed.

The book, published by Laban Heath & Co. of Boston and Washington, claimed to be "the only infallible method" of detecting counterfeit notes and bonds with "genuine designs (which were mutilated) from original government plates by authority from the United States Treasury department and the American, National and Continental Bank Note companies, New York and Boston."—Detroit News.

One Kind Act

Little Willie was so depressed one night at bed-time that his father asked him what the trouble was. Willie answered sadly that he had failed to perform a single kind action that day, thus going counter to the boy scout ritual.

"Well, cheer up," said his father. "You can perform two kind actions tomorrow."

But Willie doubted if he could make up for his fault in that way, and he turned in very low-spirited indeed. In the morning, however, he was himself again.

"Got over your troubles, eh?" said his father.

"Yes, sir," said little Willie. "I lay tossing and worrying till 2 o'clock, and then I couldn't stand it no longer, so I sneaked downstairs and gave the canary to the cat."

ANALYSES OF COAL HELP TO OPERATOR

Bureau of Mines Says It Describes Character

Coal analyses help to describe the character of the coal as it lies in the ground or as it may be delivered to the user, states N. H. Snyder, fuel engineer of the Department of the Interior, in a report recently issued by the bureau of mines, Washington. The sampler cuts a channel two by six inches or three by four inches from roof to floor in the face of the seam and excludes from the sample any partings more than three-eighths of an inch thick and any lenses or concretions of sulphur or other impurities more than two inches in maximum diameter and one-half of an inch thick, he adds.

"Analyses of mine samples form a permanent or scientific record of the coal bed at the point sampled; they are important in determining the character of the coal in any given mine or district," Mr. Snyder continues. "These analyses, when the samples are taken in a standardized manner, are valuable to the operator. When compared with analyses of delivered coal they show him whether or not his mine is being efficiently worked or whether the coal is being properly prepared—which involves the question whether he has suitable mechanical appliances for separating the impurities.

"In the purchase of coal, mine samples may serve as a sufficient guide to the experienced purchaser who has knowledge of the impurities in the seam and the degree to which these are eliminated in mining and preparing coal. To the average purchaser, unacquainted with these details, however, dependence on mine samples may be misleading. The quality of coal indicated by the face samples can rarely, if ever, be attained in the delivered coal. Certain impurities that are eliminated from the formally prepared mine sample may not be eliminated by the miner interested in getting out a large tonnage.

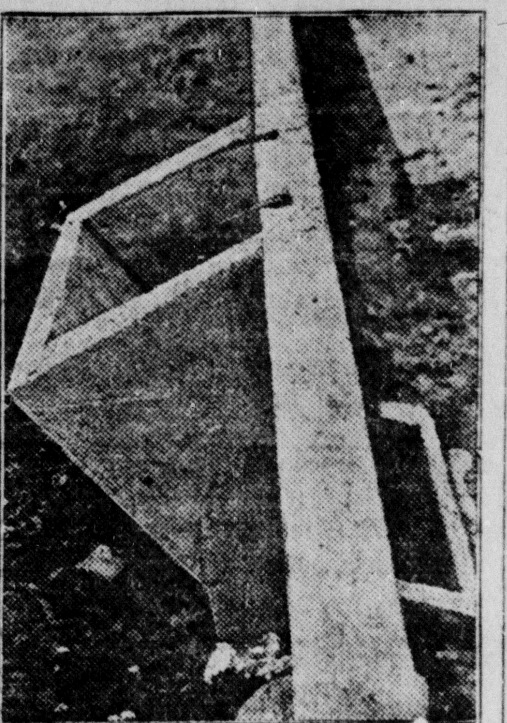

"Some of the roof and floor may also be included if these are soft or flaky. Some mine analyses, particularly those taken from geological reports, may be either from outcrop coal or small workings not beyond the influence of weathering. When coal prices are high and competition is lessened, it is easy for the miner and the management to lower the standards of preparation of the coal, and a return to rigid standards is always difficult.

"In using analyses of samples of delivered coal one must recognize that coal is not always of uniform size and that the impurities are not uniformly distributed throughout the mass. Hence there will be some variation in the results of sampling, and even though the same mass of coal is sampled a number of times, the analyses would not agree absolutely except by chance. It is only when a considerable number of analyses, representing a considerable tonnage mined over a period of time, are available that the average value and range of variation of a particular coal become known with certainty.

"Delivered coal from any given mine may differ from day to day through variations in mining or preparing the coal; hence a record of analysis of delivered coal for any one time should not be considered as a permanent record, for the output may be greatly improved by new methods of mining and preparation; or, on the other hand, the output may deteriorate through carelessness in mining or preparation."

Feeder Prevents Swine From Upsetting Swill

Handy Hog Feeder.

Carrying swill to a bunch of hungry hogs is no small accomplishment, if they are to be kept from upsetting the pail in which it is carried. So an ingenious farmer built a feeder like the one in this illustration. There is no need for a single drop to be spilled.

While it may be built of any material, this one was made of concrete and is serviceable and lasting.

World's Biggest Gem.

What is held to be the largest uncut precious stone in the world is a flawless black opal, discovered in this country and now said to be in the office of a government official in Washington. The gem contains approximately 21 cubic inches, weighs 2,572,332 carats and is valued by the owners at $250,000. The colors are translucent blues and greens with a little red. The famous Viennese opal, which was without equal until the American specimen was found, weighs 1,658,927 carats, but has a number of flaws.

GERTRUDE COLLINS

Died at Home of Parents Saturday—
Funeral Services Monday.

Gertrude Collins, daughter of William and Clara Cox Collins, died at 9:30 o'clock Saturday forenoon at her home in Darby township, after an illness of three weeks.

She is survived by her parents and the following brothers and sisters: Wert, Helen, Ward, Ruth, Doris and Myrl.

She was a member of the Greenland Methodist Episcopal church. The funeral services were held from the Darbyville Methodist church Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. J. R. Fields. Interment in the Darbyville cemetery.

Some Helpful Hints
for the Sportsmen

When a match gets wet and the head is not so soft that it drops off, there is still a chance to save it. Rubbing it lightly through the hair will dry it in an amazingly short time. Matches can be waterproofed by dipping the heads in paraffin or varnish. Much is heard about using the North star as a compass when no other means are available, yet few know exactly where it is located. The North star is located in line with the two stars forming the outer part of the "dipper."

Equal parts of tallow, fish oil and lamp black mixed with a little rosin, melted and applied hot, is an excellent waterproofing mixture for boots and shoes.

When you have a 'coon treed and cannot shine or locate him in any manner and want to keep him up the tree until daylight, take off a coat, shirt or sweater, and tie the arms around the trunk of the tree as high as you can reach. Mr. 'Coon is not very apt to come down while it is there.—Sportsmen's Digest.

Knew What He Wanted

During the recent registration of voters, the polling place being a barber shop, an Irishman entered and the foreman of the registry board addressed him:

"What is your name?"
He looked bewildered and answered: "James Flynn."

"Where were you born?"

It was plain that Flynn was annoyed, but he answered, "Ireland."

"How long are you in this country?"

Flynn, getting more indignant, answered, "Eighteen months."

"Well, as you are only one year and a half in the United States you cannot vote."

"I don't want to vote—I want a shave," was the reply.—Judge.

Leaning far over the pulpit and shaking a lean, bony finger at the aged sinner, Brother Johnson said tersely: "Never you mind, Mr. Jackson; never you mind. Teeth will be provided."

NAME DYING CITY
FOR DEAD CHIEF

Despite Glorious Past, Petrograd Appears to Be Drifting to Oblivion.

In changing the name of Petrograd to Leningrad the Soviet government has named a dying city after a dead man. Moscow, like Vienna, Riga and Trieste, after passing under the shadow of poverty thrown by war devastation, is once more on the path to prosperity, but the city of the czars, despite its glorious past, appears to be drifting toward oblivion.

"Old St. Petersburg by any name will be known as a city which, like Tell-el-Amarna, the citadel of the Ankh-Amen's father-in-law, was dedicated to a great ideal," a bulletin from the National Geographic society says. "St. Petersburg was the lever used by Peter the Great to lift Russia out of her stodgy Asiatic habits into the light of European culture and commerce."

Loses Chief Right to Live.

"Russia's window to Europe" was the significant designation of St. Petersburg before the war and revolution. Riga and Warsaw now are both the doors and windows of Russia when she chooses to use them, and with the transfer of government to the more centrally located city of Moscow, Leningrad has lost its chief reason for being much more than a railway junction. Before the war it had a population of 2,000,000. Now it has fewer than one-third that number.

"Except for the main avenues, Leningrad's streets are deserted; grass grows between the cobblestones, street cars are running half empty when they do run, most of the shops and gay restaurants are closed. The harbor holds no fleets even when the ice is out in April. Leningrad offers a melancholy sight to the tourist. Stately mansions of royalty are tumbling in. Many were built on piles like houses in Venice or Amsterdam, and the foundations are collapsing. Basements are filled with the Neva's overflow and roofs and window frames have been torn out long ago to supply fuel for a desperate citizenry. Famous parks are wildernesses. Gaunt factories are empty and still."

"How different when the brilliant Catherine ruled 100 years ago! Some called her Catherine the Great; many called her Catherine the Bad. Good or bad, with an empire as large as the Roman empire from which to exact wealth, she set a pace for extravagance, contempt for human life and loose living which Nero himself might be pushed to equal. She built palaces in rapid succession for her favorites. One of them, Orloff, returned the favor by strangling her husband, that Catherine might satisfy her ambition to be sovereign of all Russia from the Atlantic to the Pacific. For Potemkin she built the Taurida palace at a cost of millions, estimated in dollars, and hundreds of lives."

"Potemkin, in his gratitude, gave an entertainment typical of lavish royal St. Petersburg. For illumination $200,000 was spent. On one evening 140,000 lamps and 20,000 wax candles were burning. Between the palace and the river the whole space was occupied by booths, swings and shops, where clothes, boots, caps and gee-gaws were distributed gratis. Three thousand guests were invited and all attended in costume. White dresses of members of the special ballet were decorated with diamonds. Invisible music boxes played selections of noted composers. When they were silent three hundred musicians and singers played and sang for the merrymakers. Potemkin himself had a crown for the occasion so heavy with jewels he was compelled to give it to his adjutant to carry!"

Suffered With Serfs.

"This former capital of Russia has always had the reputation of being disease-ridden. Within the last year the death rate has fallen lower than the usual figure, which hovers about 35 per thousand. The reason offered, however, is that the weak have all died off and only the strong remain. This is what comes of a czar's whim, for Peter the Great insisted that his 'window to Europe' rise on the swamp where the Neva enters a shallow bay of the Gulf of Finland. There it stands, now girded round about with gray granite quays, but the Neva still gets out of hand when a stiff southwest wind backs up water in the bay. Royalty suffered along with serf. Peter died from fever caused by his rescue of a peasant woman and child who had fallen through the ice. The average reign of seven monarchs in the first forty years after the founding of the city was less than six years."

"Peter the Great had a 'marine complex.' Russians traditionally avoid the ocean. But not Peter. He loved the sea from boyhood when he satisfied his longing by making boats. His great desire was that Russia should become a seafaring nation and that his capital would one day outshine Venice and Amsterdam. So profound was his veneration of the Dutch that he called his city Sankt Petersburg. This became St. Petersburg, which gave way at the opening of the World war to Petrograd, because the older name was too German. Leningrad, like Venice and Amsterdam, has numerous canals, but unlike these two cities, it can never be a great port. The river and bay, for one thing, are frozen solid six months of the year. The hinterland on which Leningrad draws is a forest district. Riga is the logical western port for the great producing sections of Russia."

The average reign of seven monarchs in the first forty years after the founding of the city was less than six years."

"Peter the Great had a 'marine complex.' Russians traditionally avoid the ocean. But not Peter. He loved the sea from boyhood when he satisfied his longing by making boats. His great desire was that Russia should become a seafaring nation and that his capital would one day outshine Venice and Amsterdam. So profound was his veneration of the Dutch that he called his city Sankt Petersboorgh. This became St. Petersburg, which gave way at the opening of the World war to Petrograd, because the older name was too German. Leningrad, like Venice and Amsterdam, has numerous canals, but unlike these two cities, it can never be a great port. The river and bay, for one thing, are frozen solid six months of the year. The hinterland on which Leningrad draws is a forest district. Riga is the logical western port for the great producing sections of Russia."

CONFIDENCE

The most beautiful of all human relationships are based on CONFIDENCE. Love is based on confidence, friendship is based on confidence, happy marriages are based on confidence; and so, confidence is the highest aim a business institution can achieve, because it introduces into the processes of buying and selling, something of the unselfish quality of those sacred human relationships that are untouched and uncontaminated by money. This store never wants to be guilty of such bad taste as to claim perfection, but it makes no secret of its ambition to foster and deserve at all times the confidence of its customers.

There is no higher succrss than TO BE BELIEVED IN!
